Caledonia Nordic Ski Club Hosts Teck Northern Cup 1&2 December 21, 2022

December 21, 2022 For Immediate Release

PLUNGING TEMPERATURES DIDN'T STOP NORTHERN SKIERS

Cross-country ski racers aged 7 to 65 from Smithers, Houston, Vanderhoof and Quesnel braved the brisk winds and cold temperatures to join their friends and competitors in Prince George for the first Teck Northern Cup of the season on December 17th. The course conditions were in world-class shape and plunging temperatures did not stop 130 volunteers from bundling up to support 106 racers.

The bright blue skies were the perfect backdrop for skiers to challenge distances up to 5.0

km in the classic technique, interval start race. The race was originally planned as a sprint race, but organizers had to pivot to a race format that would reduce the amount of time for volunteers and racers in the frigid conditions. 106 racers turned to 51, and the beep clock signalled the first starter to leave the gate!

The cold temperatures made the snow crystals sharper and therefore slower, so athletes worked harder and smarter to get the most glide from their skis. Some athletes wore masks to help protect their lungs by warming and humidifying the cold, dry air. As racers lunged across the finish line, ready with blankets

to bundle them up
while they gulped
down a recovery
snack, before
heading for shelter.
The U12 and younger skiers let out a roaring cheer when the announcement came that they could race in the afternoon. Unfortunately, the second day of racing was cancelled, as temperatures dropped below -20 C and then -40 C!

The Teck Northern Cup races have always been an integral part of helping young skiers discover the thrill of racing in a fun low-pressure environment. Northern BC's race teams used this weekend's event to help both skiers and waxers prepare for the race season ahead, while recreational skiers pushed themselves against the clock or just enjoyed the trails under the brilliant blue sky. The Caledonia Organizing Committee was able to fine-tune their skills and equipment in preparation for the Nordiq Canada Selection Trials and Nordiq Cup to be hosted January 18 to 21, 2023 and the Biathlon BC Cup, which will unfold on February 24 to 26, 2023. For more information about upcoming competitions, visit

It takes a community of volunteers, athletes, sponsors, coaches, club members, friends, employees and families to make events like this one a success! Thank you to everyone! See you on the snow!
